Cavalry Divisions

In 1914 each cavalry division had two brigades. Each brigade had two regiments, each with six squadrons. The line divisions each contained a dragoon, an uhlan, a hussar and a cossack regiment. Under the divisional HQ was a mounted artillery detachment with two horse batteries and a mounted machine gun command. Each battery had six 76.2mm guns and the machine gun commands had 8 machineguns.

In March 1917 the cavalry regiments of the line divisions were reduced from six to four squadrons each. The excess squadrons were dismounted to form new "Cavalry Rifle Regiments" numbered #1-#16. One was attached to each cavalry division. These new regiments contained three small battalions. The cossack divisions and regiments were not effected by this change, nor were the guards or units on the Caucasian front.
