FEATURED ARTICLES

2 Military Interrogation of Terror Suspects: Imaginative Does Not Have to Mean Unlawful

Lieutenant Colonel David G. Bolgiano, U.S. Air Force, and Colonel L. Morgan Banks, U.S. Army

The Army should mandate a rigorous selection of military interrogators and remove unnecessary legal and administrative restrictions on interrogation techniques.

11 Measuring Economic Development in a COIN Environment

Lieutenant Colonel Nancy E. Blacker, U.S. Army, and Lieutenant Colonel Charlie H. Kim, U.S. Army

Two 25th Infantry Division staff officers discuss the trials and tribulations of measuring economic progress in the midst of counterinsurgency efforts and recommend all agencies involved develop a unified plan.

19 Controlling the Human High Ground: Identifying Cultural Opportunities for Insurgency

Major Mark J. Broekhuizen, U.S. Marine Corps

Denying or limiting the opportunities for insurgents should be a primary focus for counterinsurgency planning and operations.

25 Dealing with Absolutes: Religion, the Operational Environment, and the Art of Design

Lieutenant Colonel Prisco R. Hernández, Ph.D., U.S. Army Reserve

Strategists must understand the role of religion in individual and collective human interactions to facilitate realistic operational plans.

34 Counterinsurgency in Nangarhar Province, Eastern Afghanistan, 2004-2008

Robert Kemp

A State Department foreign service officer describes how an integrated civil-military effort, in cooperation with the government of Afghanistan, conducted counterinsurgency and counternarcotics in Nangarhar Province.

43 Identifying the Center of Gravity of Afghan Mentoring

Major David H. Park, U.S. Army

We are not developing a band of insurgents as Lawrence of Arabia did. Afghans need our help in building systems to build a self-sustaining army.

51 The Criticality of Captains' Education: Now and in the Future

Colonel William M. Raymond, Jr., Ph.D., U.S. Army; Lieutenant Colonel Keith R. Beurskens, U.S. Army, Retired; and Lieutenant Colonel Steven M. Carmichael, U.S. Army, Retired

By committing the necessary resources to ensure a quality education for our captains, the Army can demonstrate its commitment to developing future leaders.

58 Toxic Leadership: Part Deux

Colonel George E. Reed, Ph.D., U.S. Army, Retired, and Lieutenant Colonel Richard Olsen, D.Min., U.S. Army, Retired

In a follow-up study of a 2004 article on leadership, the authors find that many mid-grade officers believe that their previous superiors were toxic leaders.

65 Technician and Philosopher: Building the Relevance and Intellectual Capital of the Army's Information Warriors

James E. Shircliffe, Jr.

A seasoned intelligence analyst maintains that information operations officers need to have non-traditional assignments and in-country cultural immersion to be effective.

71 "Divorce Counseling": Civil Affairs Proponency under a New Support Paradigm

Captain Sean P. Walsh, U.S. Army

A Civil Affairs team leader calls for a new paradigm with dramatic changes for the Civil Affairs proponent to establish the branch as a crucial battlefield system.

79 The U.S. Army Approach to Security Force Assistance

Brigadier General Edward P. Donnelly, U.S. Army; Colonel Mike Redmond, British Army; and Major Bill Torrey, U.S. Army

The Army must adapt its force management institutions to sustain security force assistance and make it as much a core competency as the ability to conduct combat operations.

85 Foreign Disaster Response: Joint Task Force-Haiti: Observations

Lieutenant General P.K. (Ken) Keen, U.S. Army; Lieutenant Colonel Matthew G. Elledge, U.S. Army; Lieutenant Colonel Charles W. Nolan, U.S. Army; and Lieutenant Colonel Jennifer L. Kimmey, U.S. Army

The commander of Joint Task Force-Haiti stresses that we must use a "whole of international community" effort for successful foreign disaster relief.

INSIGHTS

97 Reintegration and Reconciliation in Afghanistan: Time to End the Conflict

Lieutenant Colonel Mark E. Johnson, U.S. Army

The Afghan government and people understand that the time has come to put an end to armed conflict and reconcile and reintegrate former insurgents.
