2 The Infantry Squad: Decisive Force Now and in the Future

Major General Robert B. Brown, U.S. Army

The U.S. Army dismounted infantry maneuver squad is today's most decisive force on the battlefield, yet it lacks access to capabilities it needs to truly synchronize the total fight.

10 A Resource Constrained Environment: A Primer to Thinking About Force Structure Change

Major Jeremy Gray, U.S. Army, and Rickey Smith

Budget constraints are necessitating force structure reductions across the armed forces. To avoid weakening the Army, leaders need to work from an objective logic framework to guide informed decisions.

18 Surging Security Force Assistance in Afghanistan

Lieutenant General William B. Caldwell, IV, with Derek S. Reveron

The size of the Afghan National Security Force has increased substantially and it is assuming responsibility for security.

23 Counterinsurgency Vocabulary and Strategic Success

James Thomas Snyder

Western governments and militaries lack a good vocabulary to articulate counterinsurgency strategy to the public.

29 Adaptive Leadership in the Military Decision Making Process

Lieutenant Colonel William J. Cojocar, Ph.D., U.S. Army, Retired

Adaptive leadership is an accepted and necessary leadership practice that facilitates success in a difficult and changing environment.

35 Rhodesia's Approach to Counterinsurgency: A Preference for Killing

Marno de Boer

The Rhodesian Bush War can serve as a warning for soldiers engaged in enemy-centric "anti-terrorism" operations.

46 Soldiers All

Robert M. Hill, Ed.D.

Despite significant advances in the integration of minorities into the military, we still have more to learn and farther to go before we are an "Army of One."

49 Flight Simulation for the Brain: Why Army Officers Must Write

Major Trent J. Lythgoe, U.S. Army

If the Army wants better thinkers, it should start by educating better writers.

Military Review is a refereed journal that provides a forum for original thought and debate on the art and science of land warfare and other issues of current interest to the U.S. Army and the Department of Defense. Military Review also supports the education, training, doctrine development, and integration missions of the Combined Arms Center, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

57 Leader Development for Coalition Partnership

Colonel Rainer Waelde, Deutsche Bundeswehr, and Lieutenant Colonel Robert D. Schwartzman, U.S. Army, Retired

A U.S. Army officer and a German Army officer discuss leader development and leadership training and education.

63 The 2008 Russian Cyber Campaign Against Georgia

Captain Paulo Shakarian, Ph.D., U.S. Army

Priority information requirements and cyber reconnaissance and surveillance planning should be adjusted to account for a cyber-capable enemy.

70 A More Agile Pentagon

Paul Scharre

The traditional Department of Defense acquisition process is not agile enough to adapt to a rapidly changing and uncertain future. If the military is to remain relevant, it must move fast and be more flexible.
