

Headquarters TRADOC

TRADOC This Week

Victory Starts Here!

Senior Leader Comments

Our Leader Development Strategy describes a shifting balance of tactical and operational art as our adversaries decentralize, network, and operate among the people to overcome our technological advantages and as we string together actions and activities—some kinetic and some non-kinetic—to produce campaign quality outcomes.

Gen. Martin Dempsey
TRADOC Commanding General

Resiliency Training: The student's perspective

Maj. Damon Delarosa

We continued to press on today in MRT. The focus of the day was on building character strengths. In order to prepare for today's class, all students had to take the University of Pennsylvania's VIA Survey of Character Strengths which rank orders 24 character strengths. I think the results of that survey surprised many people; I know I was surprised with my results.

For Full Article, Click Here

About this Newsletter

TRADOC This Week is a weekly newsletter covering TRADOC news within the Army and commercial media. TRADOC This Week is maintained by the HQ TRADOC Public Affairs Office.

To subscribe to TRADOC This Week, please contact heath.steele@us.army.mil

New robots do jobs with little human direction

Kris Osborn, Army Times

The Army plans within 18 months to field robots that will do some tasks without direct human control, such as finding explosives and transporting equipment, service officials said. The robots will turn corners, clear dangerous areas, capture images with a "persistent stare" and beam them back, and follow convoys without being tele-operated as they are now, officials said.

For Full Article, Click Here

Army developing global network

Joshua Wick

In the future, Soldiers should be able to access the Army's global network anywhere in the world using capabilities similar to a Blackberry or iPhone, said the Army's chief information officer. Lt. Gen. Jeffrey Sorenson, the Army's CIO/G-6, presented "Army Modernization and the Network" at the Association of the United States Army's Institute of Land Warfare breakfast series Nov. 12.

For Full Article, Click Here

Experts gather to learn about knowledge management

Bill Ackerley

More than 370 knowledge management practitioners gathered in Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 19-23 for the fifth annual Army Operational Knowledge Management Conference, sponsored by the U.S. Army Combined Arms Center and hosted by the Battle Command Knowledge System.

For Full Article, Click Here

Proof of Army Family Covenant success found among facts, figures

Patrick Buffet

Two years ago, former Secretary of the Army Pete Geren joined Fort Monroe leaders here for the signing of a much celebrated document called the Army Family Covenant. It made several promises - the foremost of which is a commitment to "create a quality of life in the military community that is commensurate with the value of the American Soldier."

For Full Article, Click Here

First Advanced Course of the fiscal year graduates

Kyonna Withers

Army civilians have historically made significant contributions to the execution of the Army's mission. The Army's reliance on civilians is even more pronounced today. Scott F. Miller, Deputy Director of Training, HQDA Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff G-3/5/7, delivered this message to 35 Civilian Education System Advanced Course graduates at the recognition ceremony at Army Management Staff College on Oct. 30 at Fort Belvoir, Va.

For Full Article, Click Here