

Mr. James (Jim) E. Bradley
Interim Chief Knowledge Officer (CKO)
U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC)
Fort Monroe, Virginia

Mr. Bradley is currently serving as the Interim Chief Knowledge Officer (CKO) for the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). In this capacity, Mr. Bradley has overseen the establishment of the TRADOC Knowledge Office with a broad range of ACOM knowledge management (KM) responsibilities. These responsibilities have included coordinating the Knowledge and Information Management in the Generating Force Study, establishment of the TRADOC KM Brain Trust Working Group, the TRADOC KM Strategic Plan and serving as the HQ TRADOC Warfighter Forum (WfF) lead.

Mr. Bradley has worked in TRADOC for the past 12 years. His TRADOC assignments include Deputy Chief of Staff for Base Operations (DCSBOS), Deputy Chief of Staff for Training (DCST), U.S. Army Training Support Center (ATSC), Army Capabilities Integration Center (ARCIC), Deputy Chief of Staff G3/5/7, TRADOC CG Commander's Planning Group (CPG), and currently with the TRADOC DCG/CoS.

Mr. Bradley has over 31 years of federal service. Past agency assignments have included the U.S. Coast Guard (active duty and civilian), Central Intelligence Agency, and the U.S. Navy. During his career, he has worked in the knowledge management, education/training and information management fields.

Mr. Bradley earned a Master of Arts in Education and Human Development (educational technology concentration) from The George Washington University, Bachelor of Science in Organizational Management and Development from Bluefield College, and a Graduate Executive Certificate in Information Systems from Strayer University. Additionally, he has attended numerous courses in information management from the Information Management Resources College at the National Defense University as well as industry and Department of the Army leadership courses.

In his spare time, Mr. Bradley enjoys training and competing in triathlons, cycling, and running events. Additionally, he is a percussionist with the New River Symphony Orchestra.