US Army Combined Arms Center – Warrior Reference Library

The Warrior Reference Library (WRL) is an initiative by the Combined Arms Center to consolidate its various document databases into a common system that will consolidate 75,000-100,000 documents into a single system that can be accessed by any member of DoD and other authorized users.

The ultimate collection will contain primarily reference materials that are related to the various missions that have been assigned to the Commander, CAC. The overall functions of the library are focused primarily on providing a stable set of materials that can be used in a wide variety of training, education, knowledge, publishing and other applications. To this end, it provides General Support to the variety of CAC organizations that actually do something with information products, and Direct Support to the Soldier who is looking for a particular document or set of documents.
