Program Manager
Army Knowledge Management Proponent
Command and Control Integration Directorate
Mission Command Center of Excellence
Combined Arms Center

Joe Koskey is the Program Manager of the Army Knowledge Management Proponent Office at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He is responsible for force modernization integration of knowledge management across the Total Army. Prior to his arrival to the AKM-PO, he was the senior civilian Knowledge Management Officer for the United States Army Pacific Command at Fort Shafter, Hawaii, responsible for theater-level KM strategic planning, assessment, coordination, implementation, and integration across the U.S. Indo-Pacific Command area of operations. He has been formally involved with informing and educating senior leaders in knowledge management since 2005.

He is a Massachusetts native and a graduate from the University of Maine at Orono. He holds Masters of Science degrees from Columbia University and Chapman University in Information and Knowledge Strategy and Human Resources Management, respectively. He is certified as both a Project Management and Knowledge Management Professional.

Mr. Koskey retired in 2007 from the U.S. Army Signal Corps with more than 21 years of military service. His military assignments included Army and Joint-level responsibility and experience with the infantry (mechanized), special operations, Stryker brigade, USINDOPACOM, and the Combined Arms Center. After retirement, he entered federal service as a Department of the Army Civilian and was initially responsible for program management of the Battle Command Knowledge System – the precursor to the Army Knowledge Management Proponent. Mr. Koskey is married, has one son, and is a proud grandfather.
