

Brigadier General Katherine A. Trombley

Deputy Commanding General,
Army Reserve, U.S. Army
Combined Arms Center

BG Katherine Trombley earned a commission in the Quartermaster Corps through the University of Washington ROTC program in June of 1996. Lieutenant General Beagle holds master's degrees from Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas, and the United States Army School of Advanced Military Studies (SAMS), Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

BG Trombley deployed to Afghanistan with the CENTCOM Material Recovery Element, 82nd Sustainment Brigade, 1st Theater Support Command Forward, in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. Preceding her deployment her most recent assignments include; G3/5/7 Strategic Planner, Office of Chief of Army Reserve; Joint Staff, J8, Personnel Protection Branch Chief; J8 Directorate, Executive Assistant; Battalion Commander, 11th Battalion Army Reserve Careers Division; interim Brigade Commander, Army Reserve Careers Division; G33 Current Operations Director, Office of Chief of the Army Reserve; Executive Officer to the Chief of the Army Reserve and Commanding General, United States Reserve Command; Africa Affairs Central Africa Country Director and Military Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs, Office of the Secretary of Defense Policy.

BG Trombley holds a Masters in Strategic Studies, U.S. Army War College and a Bachelor of Arts in Communication from Seattle Pacific University. Her military education includes; Quartermaster Officer Basic Course, Combined Logistics Officer Advanced Course; Combined Arms and Services Staff School, ILE Core and Advanced Operations Course; Support Operations Course; and Joint Logistics Course. She is also a Fellow of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Seminar XXI Program.

BG Trombley is the proud parent of a twenty three year old daughter Alexis, and twenty one year old son Kyle